

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

The President Appoints Thursday, November 29th.

By the President of the United States—A Proclamation.

The recurrence of that season at which it is the habit of our people to make devout and public confession of their constant dependence on Divine favor for all good gifts of life and happiness, and of public peace and prosperity, as exhibited in the harvest of the year, the abundant reasons for our gratitude and thanksgiving, the exuberant harvest, the productive industry, ample crops, of the staples of life, the manifold which have enriched the country; the resources thus far furnished to our reviving industry and expanding commerce, and the continued favor of Providence have given way to confidence and energy and assured prosperity; peace with all nations has remained unbroken; domestic tranquility has prevailed, and the institutions of liberty and justice which the wisdom and virtue of our fathers established, remain the glory and the defense of their children. The general prevalence of the blessings of health throughout our wide land has made more conspicuous the sufferings and sorrows which the dark shadow of pestilence has cast on a portion of our people. This heavy affliction, even the Divine Ruler has tempered to the suffering communities by the universal sympathy and succor which have flowed to their relief, and the whole nation may rejoice in the unity of spirit in our people by which they cheerfully share one another's grief.

Now, therefore, I, Rutherford B. Hayes, President of the United States, do appoint Thursday, the 29th day of November, as a day of national thanksgiving and prayer, and I earnestly recommend that, withdrawing themselves from secular care and labor, the people of the United States do meet together on that day in their respective places of worship, to give thanks and praise to Almighty God for His manifold and bountiful beneficence to their continuance.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at the City of Washington, this 30th day of October, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight, and the independence of the United States one hundred and third.

R. B. HAYES.
By the President,
WM. M. EVANS, Secretary of State.

THE GERMAN AMERICANS.

There is no nationality in this country more loyal to the Government than the Germans. In every contest in which the interests of the general Government have been at stake, we have always found the mass of our German friends on the right side. This was the case in that dreadful combat between Freedom and Slavery.

Comparatively, the number of Germans was small who then sympathized with the Democratic party, in waging a civil war for the perpetuation of the enslavement of the negro. The German loves liberty as dearly as he loves his beer, and he will fight for it and vote for it, and no party can hold him which opposes the principles of genuine freedom of progress and reform. This much can also be said of the Scandinavians, who in this respect march shoulder to shoulder with the Germans. In the Southern States to-day, where law and order are unknown, and where the Democratic party rules with the bayonet and the pistol, the Germans stand firmly on the side of free speech and a free ballot. This is the case in South Carolina as well as in other States. Last week we published a letter giving an account of a Mr. Maxson, in Texas, who had nearly all his stock taken from him by the Texas Democrats, and who, not content with robbing him of several thousand dollars' worth of stock in daylight, demanded that he should leave the country or forfeit his life. In giving some account of the condition of politics in that State, Mr.
Maxson said that in the Northern part of Texas, where there was a strong German element, the people were loyal, and socially and politically there is no disturbance among them.

In the recent contest between honest money and a debased currency, the Germans throughout the United States were almost unanimous for sound money. In Cincinnati, where the German vote is very strong, the part they played in advocating a constitutional currency, was exceedingly important. The Democrats undertook to compromise and make peace with fiatists and repudiators, whereupon the Germans of the city went solidly for hard money, resulting in the election of two Republican Congressmen from that city. In Milwaukee, the Democratic nominee for Congress was P. V.
Daester, a prominent German and editor.
Politically, he was not only dishonest, but he catered to the Greenback influence, and the result is that in a District which usually gives from 5,000 to 7,000 Democratic majority, Daester is elected by less than 100 majority! Milwaukee is strongly German, and so is Washington county, and yet they gave remarkable majorities for Mr. Frisby! And beside this, the Republicans elected the entire county ticket in Milwaukee, which shows that the Germans contributed very largely to the success of the Republican ticket. They did the same in Rock county, and also in Dane, where Republicanism and honest money principles were soundly endorsed.

Lockport, New York, a city of from 15,000 to 20,000 inhabitants, is heated by a series of steam pipes which permeate the city very much as gas pipes do. The system is one introduced by Birdsall Holly, the originator of the Holly system of water works. The plan works with remarkable satisfaction in Lockport. There was considerable prejudice against it when the question was first agitated, but since the works have been completed, the expectations of its warmest friends have been more than realized. It is more convenient for public buildings than the common furnaces, and the buildings have been more perfectly warmed and more thoroughly ventilated than ever before.

Besides this, comfort, health, and economy have been promoted. These do not apply merely to public buildings, but the heating of private residences has been attended by the same economic and salutary results.
The report of the Company shows that the loss of vitality or heating power of the steam when conveyed through long distances is found to be so very small as hardly to come into the calculation of the Company. It says that steam heat can be furnished by boilers of sufficient capacity, through pipes of sufficient size, to an area of four miles square from one set of boilers. When a city can be illuminated by

The Bible Revision.

The revision of the English Bible which began May 6, 1870, says the Chicago Tribune, is now more than half done. It is probable that the New Testament at least will be published in 1880. This work is the most important of its kind that has been undertaken in the Christian church since the King James revision. It is, indeed, the first concerted effort by English-speaking Protestants to correct the errors and archaisms of that edition, and it is the only one that has the least promise of general acceptance. It derives its importance largely from the fact that all the principal Protestant denominations are represented in the committee engaged on the revision. The movement began in the English established church, but, with a liberality quite worthy of the occasion, the first committee was authorized to associate with itself in the work Christian scholars of other churches using the King James version.

The object of the revision is said by Professor Schaff, President of the American Committee, to be the bringing of King James' version up to the present state of the English language, and to the present standard of biblical scholarship. The principles adopted by the committee for its own guidance are as follows:

1. To introduce as few alterations as possible in the text of the authorized version, consistently with faithfulness.
2. To limit as far as possible the expression of such alterations to the language of the authorized or earlier versions. (Only one new word has been introduced in the New Testament.)
3. Each company to go twice over the portion to be revised, once provisionally, the second time finally.
4. That the text to be adopted be that for which the evidence is decidedly preponderant; and that, when the text so adopted differs from that from which the authorized version was made, the alteration be indicated on the margin.
5. To make or retain no change in the text, on the second final revision by each company, except two-thirds of those present approve of the same; but on the first revision to divide by simple majority.
6. To revise the headings of chapters, pages, paragraphs, italics and punctuation.

OUTWITTING A CANNIBAL.

One of the Customs of the Country in New Caledonia.

One of the wealthiest settlers in New Caledonia is a gentleman from Australia—we will call him Mr. Brown for short—who went there some ten or twelve years ago with but a small capital, and has become enormously rich by raising cattle for the markets of Noumea. Mr. Brown was on his way through the brush from one of his outlying cattle stations to another, when he lost his way entirely; wandered about till nearly nightfall, and then came upon a large native village. Here he was hospitably entertained, well fed, and most deferentially treated by the great chief—whose village it was—the chief, Atai, I think, whom some persons regard as the chief mover and leader of this year's revolt against the French. Atai was all courtesy to his white guest, and even night had fully come, conducted him himself to the hut set apart for his night's repose.

Fortunately, Mr. Brown was acquainted with the customs of the country, and among them, knew the common method of putting an end to travelers preparatory to leaving upon them. It is as follows: The traveler is kindly received; nothing occurs to shake his confidence in his host; he is allotted a cabin to sleep in. The native huts have usually but one opening, which serves as a door and window both. When the traveler is supposed to be well settled in his cabin, the entrance is closed by being thatched and made altogether of light wood, it burns very readily, and the traveler is cooked as well as killed. Then the feast begins.

Being acquainted with these details of New Caledonian life, Mr. Brown knew the man to which the venerable Atai so courteously led him might probably become for him both a tomb and a cooking stove, unless his wits could save him. He entered the cabin of the chief, meeting courtesy with courtesy, till they were both fairly within. Then Brown, in the prime of life, and athletic, Atai old and infirm, the Englishman knew he was more than a match for the savage. He closed the door within the hut, planted his back firmly against it, and sitting thus with his hand on his revolver, and his other weapons ostentatiously displayed, continued his conversation with the chief. The situation remained unchanged throughout the night. A terrible night it was, no doubt, the Englishman, and almost as bad for the old chief, who again and again requested permission to withdraw, Mr. Brown as often declaring he could not part with him—he should not feel safe except in his company.

When daylight had fully come, Mr. Brown felt assured that Atai would not venture to allow his people openly to attack an individual so well known in the settlement as himself, and both issuing forth together from the hut, he gladly accepted the escort of a native guide, and was safely conducted to the French settlements, where his adventure was the theme of considerable interest.—Correspondent San Francisco Bulletin.

The Battle of the Hymn Books.

Burling's New York letter to Boston Journal. Music in our churches is fast assuming a universal character of discord. The trouble for a long while was attributed to choirs; to the organ in the vestibule end of the church; to the want of congregational singing. Choirs have been dismissed; organs put at the pulpit end; preceptors introduced; yet the old trouble remains.

One minister quarreled with the trustees about whether one woman or another woman should play the organ. The trouble culminated in the resignation of the trustees, the resignation of the trustees, the forcible closure of the mortgage, the dismissal of the minister, the bankruptcy and ruin of the church, and the sale of the house.

Another congregation has rival candidates for the office of preceptor. Both are working like Democrats at a primary to get the position. So far neither can get the vote of the music committee. When it gets beyond that it will probably read the church.

The most extraordinary thing in the line of church music has occurred very recently in a popular up-town church. It is really a battle of hymn books. Hymn books are many and their friends are zealous and persistent. In this congregation there is a leading publisher who has a hymn book under his control. It bears the name of a Boston pastor. This book has been introduced into the congregation to the great disgust of the pastor. He has naturally exerted himself to get the book displaced. The publisher is a deacon in the church, a man of wealth and influence, and has been a great power in his denomination. He has naturally stirred himself to have the book retained. The pastor cut the Gordian knot of antagonism in a very summary manner last week. A telegram summoned the deacon to meet the pastor at a given hour at his study. He found the minister arrayed to go out, who declined any conference, but pointed to a paper lying on the desk which he requested the deacon to sign. It was a request to the church to accept the deacon's resignation. "Perhaps you would like the resignation of my membership also," suggested the official. "As you please," said the pastor, "I can get along with a paper lying on the desk which he requested the deacon to sign. It was a request to the church to accept the deacon's resignation. "Perhaps you would like the resignation of my membership also," suggested the official. "As you please," said the pastor, "I can get along with a paper lying on the desk which he requested the deacon to sign. It was a request to the church to accept the deacon's resignation.
